Cause and Effect

Dear Friends

Happy New Year. I hope your year is blessed with good health, peace and joy, and much happiness.

I am writing this article just a few days before Christmas, and at a time when I am currently undergoing some medical investigations. Should the condition they are testing me for already exist, or actually materialise in the years to come, it will more than likely have been caused by the thirty-seven years that I spent working in the chemical industry. A straightforward case of cause and effect.

It is, of course, a worrying time, and several friends have called to offer encouragement and support. Sometimes, though, their words have exactly the opposite effect to that which they intended, and have been a valuable lesson for me in 'how not to visit the sick!' However ill-chosen some of their expressions have been, I am very aware that they were offered with love and with concern. These friends were communicating their care for me and that is what is important.

Good communication is essential to the health of all our relationships, both personal and corporate, and sometimes we need to be more aware of the effect that our words are having. Words are very powerful – they can have a positive and sustaining effect – or can have the negative impact of slander or gossip. For example, there is the hastily spoken and sometimes unfair word that wounds the recipient so deeply. The misunderstanding of a throwaway phrase that stays in the mind and festers away, causing rifts that can last for years. Very often, sometimes, we neglect to use a kindly word and by leaving it unspoken, the effect on another is that they feel undervalued or ignored.

Of course, communication is not purely verbal. Our actions and attitudes can have long lasting effects on others – some we can see, but, so often, we don't fully think things through, and cause pain and hurt as a result. I think it's a good adage to, 'Put your brain into gear before putting your mouth into motion!'

Modern technology has brought a whole new dimension to communication. Text Speak, Twitter, Facebook etc. have languages of their own and, not being a participant, I am a little ignorant of much of their terminology, but the cause and effect of their impact on society is well documented and broadcast both for good and not so good.

I am certainly going to try much harder this year to consider the cause and effect of my words and actions and try to be a better communicator. Communicating the Gospel word is what we are about, as a church and as individuals, and we need to be alert to how our words and actions encourage others to be part of our worshipping community and not to be a stumbling block on anyone's pathway to faith.

To sum up by using the well known verse by Paul Gilbert:

"You are writing a Gospel,
A chapter each day,
By the deeds that you do,
By the words that you say.

Men read what you write,
Whether faithless or true;
Say, what is the Gospel
According to you?

With my very best wishes for 2016

Philip

NEW YEAR

2016

If we put our hand in God's hand
As we enter this New Year
Not knowing what the future holds
But that our Friend is near.

We shall not fear what lies ahead
If He is by our side,
Nor wander from the pathway
If He will be our guide.

The Sinless One from heaven came
To dwell with us on earth,
He sought and bought us with His blood
And offered us new birth.

Now as we travel through this year
He knows the things He's planned,
So let us trust and know just this -
Our times are in His hands.

THE BAPTISM OF JESUS

John appeared in the desert baptising and preaching and many people confessed their sins and were baptised.

Jesus came from Nazareth in Galilee and was baptised by John in the river Jordan. As soon as Jesus came up out of the water, He saw heaven opening and the Spirit coming down on Him like a dove. And a voice came from heaven, "You are my own dear Son. I am pleased with you".

Saint of the Month
13 January
George Fox,
Founder of the Society of Friends
(the Quakers), 1691

George Fox was born in 1624 at Fenny Drayton, Leicestershire, the son of a weaver. In 1643, when Fox was 19, he said that he received mystical revelations in which the voice of God told him to be directed by Christ alone. He described these revelations, which he took as a sign that everyone should be guided by their individual 'inner light', as coming to him while he waited in an absolutely calm frame of mind and as being preceded by violent physical agitation. He felt called to give up ties of family and friends and travelled in search of spiritual enlightenment.

In 1646, after many dead ends in his quest, he heard a voice which told him, 'There is one, even Christ Jesus, who can speak to thy condition.' In 1647 Fox began to preach openly his 'inner light' doctrine. He objected to political and religious authority, opposed war and slavery, and believed that all human actions should be directed by inner contemplation and a social conscience inspired by God.

On Pendle Hill in Lancashire George Fox experienced a vision of 'a people to be gathered to the Lord'. He made many converts and it was in the north-west that Fox's teachings had the greatest effect. In 1659 he made his home at Swarthmore Hall near Ulverston, owned by an influential supporter, Thomas Fell. When Fell died Fox married his widow, Margaret.

Fox's overt opposition to the established Church (whether Presbyterian or Anglican) resulted in frequent imprisonment – in 1649, 1650, 1653, 1656, 1664-6, 1673-5 – and it was the judge who sentenced him at Derby in 1650 who contemptuously described Fox and his followers as 'quakers' – a name which was to come into widespread use.

In 1666, though weakened by hardship and the effects of imprisonment, Fox began to devote most of his time to the organisation of the Quakers as a Church. He was greatly assisted by Margaret Fell, whom he married in 1669, the year of the first great Quaker meeting. He also made missionary journeys to North America, Germany and Holland.

Fox spent his final years founding Quaker schools and communities and lobbying for passage of the Toleration Bill, which granted freedom of worship to all except Roman Catholics and Unitarians, that was finally enacted by Parliament in 1689. The Quakers registered under the Act as the 'Society of Friends'. He died in 1691 and his Journal was published posthumously in 1694.

On page 2 of Fox's Epistles (Volume VII of his Works), a prayer appears just before the first epistle:

Upon the Fourth-day of the First month, 1650, I felt the power of the Lord to spread over all the world in praise.

Praise, honour, and glory be to the Lord of heaven and earth! Lord of peace, Lord of joy! thy countenance maketh my heart glad. Lord of glory, Lord of mercy, Lord of strength, Lord of life, and of power over death, and Lord of lords, and King of kings! In the world there are lords many, but to us there is but one God the Father, of whom are all things; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things: to whom be all glory, who is worthy! In the world are many lords, and many gods, and the earth maketh lords, coveting after riches, and oppressing the creatures; and so, the covetous mind getting to itself, lords it above others. This nature of lordly pride is head, until subdued by the power of God: for everyone in that state, doth strive to be above another; few will strive to be the lowest. Oh! that everyone would strive to put down in themselves, mastery and honour, that the Lord of heaven and earth might be exalted!
